I'm working on an android application that takes a very long time to compute some data. Currently, I have three AsyncTasks going on in the onPostExecute() method of my Activity class to finish off the data. One for checking a user's username (this only happens once), one for email verification, and one for email sending. However, I have multiple instances of this process that are happening simultaneously. If a user has 5 email addresses to verify, the chances of sending a verification email to the 5th one while the phone is ringing is very high. This makes the phones vibrate, which is almost definitely going to annoy the user. I'm trying to figure out where the best place
