You can use the recovery or flash from this page.In U.S. Pat. Nos. 4,372,764, 4,572,186 and 4,592,914 there is described a process for preparation of optically active 1,1-diamines by the reaction of a 1,1-dialkyl-1,2-diamine with an optically active.alpha.,.beta.-unsaturated ketone, in the presence of a halide of an element of Group VII B. The reaction is carried out in an organic liquid solvent, optionally containing an inorganic catalyst. The 1,1-dialkyl-1,2-diamine is formed as a by-product. The optically active diamines can be separated from the by-product 1,1-dialkyl-1,2-diamine by a number of methods; for example crystallisation of an enantiomer from the reaction mixture followed by filtration of the crystalline enantiomer. This requires a further separation step. Another process is to maintain the reaction mixture in the presence of an optically active acid and separate the optically active diamine from the by-product by extraction with an optically active solvent. Examples of the optically active acids include the optically active acid derived from tartaric acid. The process of the invention has a number of advantages over the above-described methods of separating a 1,1-dialkyl-1,2-diamine from an optically active 1,1-dialkyl-1,2-diamine by-product. The recovered enantiomer of a 1,1-dialkyl-1,2-diamine is the one which can be used in subsequent processes, for example as a component in asymmetric synthesis. In the present application a 1,1-dialkyl-1,2-diamine is a compound of formula 1. ##STR1## The term ".DELTA." as used in this specification means that the carbon atom through which the group is attached is either optically inactive, or essentially inactive, as a result of attachment to an electron-withdrawing group, or the carbon is optically active with equal amounts of optical activity, whichever is

The closed

post is shown by default in the question list, but people sometimes have to find the question through search. While typing the title of the question in the search box, it's also shown in the search results so the user can use that search to find the question. Here is an example, copied from the search box: Is there a way to have the system suggest a more compact title on the post when you start typing it? For example, if I search for "where is", there is no way I can type "where is a b?". If I do it myself, I get the following (which is still very bad in my opinion): A: Although this is a nice idea, I'm against this as it introduces wrong feeling. To do that, we would need real text for this pattern. So, I suggest we move on with standard one. We can improve this one with community. Stable cell-free RNA production from S. cerevisiae nuclear polyhedrosis virus replicons. The addition of the cationic polypeptide VP16 to in vitro transcription reactions containing heterologous viral replicons encoding cytoplasmic polyadenylation sequences, resulted in the production of transcripts containing up to 13 and 40 adenine residues. The addition of VP16 increased transcription efficiency by up to two orders of magnitude. It was observed that in a small number of reactions, transcription was inhibited, presumably due to the presence of competitive endogenous transcripts which terminate at or before the site for the RNA template used to synthesize additional transcripts. In addition, the addition of VP16 resulted in the appearance of putative transcripts containing alternate acceptor sequences, which may result from an increase in the frequency of premature RNA termination events. The addition of VP16 also increased the efficiency with which heterologous replicons were transcribed by approximately one order of magnitude. Our results suggest that VP16 is involved in transcription of viral sequences that contain cytop 1cdb36666d (WGPKaty) would like to communicate with you about revisions to their Houston to Katy points on the Williams Texas Pipeline. This memo is intended to make you aware of this change and to answer your questions about this change. We are proposing to revise the Houston to Katy interruptible points to follow the same "delivery at receipt" approach as our other markets. Revisions to these points would result in the receipt point at Meter Mound, Texas, being at a higher pressure than the delivery point at Jackson, Texas. When this happens, about 600 MMcf/d of the 1,106 MMcf/d of WGPHouston's scheduled volume of WGPHouston's firm transportation will have about 100 MMcf/d of excess takeaway capacity. An additional 300 MMcf/d of WGPHouston's scheduled volume will have about 50 MMcf/d of excess takeaway capacity. In addition, we would like to increase volumes on the Williams Texas Pipeline at meter 03087796 from 100,000 MMcf/d to 150,000 MMcf/d. This change would have the effect of increasing the reverse flow on this delivery at receipt point by about 50 MMcf/d. These volume changes would result in a change in the total WGPHouston's deliver
