Create a new document with a resolution of 300 pixels x 300 pixels. Set the new file type as RGB, which is the most common format. You can also use a JPEG, TIFF, or Photoshop File. 2. Choose File=Open and navigate to the book's `Photoshop Files` folder to find the file called `columbia_water_small.psd`. Double-click the file to import it into the document and open it. 3. Let's begin editing. When Photoshop opens, you see the document window, as shown in Figure 5-1. Scroll to the right side of the new document window to see the Panels bar, containing your tools and features. 4. First, select the Rectangular Marquee tool (M) from the Tools panel. An eyedropper automatically appears in the center of the document window, allowing you to select a specific color from any part of your image. Press the spacebar to drop the cursor on the left side of the document window and then press the Delete key on the keyboard. You now have a free section of your image that you can select for editing. The image should look like Figure 5-2. 5. The main menu in the top left corner of the document window opens. In the Layers panel, which is to the far left side of the document window, click the New Layer button. When the New Layer dialog box appears, name this layer Background and click OK. 6. With the Background layer active, in the Layers panel, click the Add Layer Mask button in the lower-left corner of the layers panel. The mask's Color Picker window appears, showing the option available to you. Click on the solid color square in the middle of the Color Picker window to set the foreground color. Click OK to accept the change. 7. Next, select the Rectangular Marquee tool from the Tools panel and drag the rectangle to create a selected area for saving the originality of the image. In this next section of the exercise, you'll convert the selected area to black. Then you'll replace the selected section of the image with a new, greener-colored portion. These steps are shown in Figure 5-3. 8. Select the Brush tool. Using a black brush, paint some of the selected area to the left with black. Press Ctrl+Z (PC:) to

Wheeled-puller A wheeled-puller or wheeled-puller omnibus is a style of wheeled passenger omnibus, usually powered by a small steam engine. It was frequently made to work on small railway lines in the UK during the twentieth century. They were often launched on short journeys, such as the London and North Eastern Railway's Ludgate Hill to Finsbury Park route, using traction motors to drive two sets of wheels, and then towing a horse or passenger coach (or trailer) behind the vehicle. The last LNER wheeled-pullers were withdrawn in 1958, and only three carriage-drawn LNER vehicles were still in existence at the time (including two original types). Later developments included LNER departmental shunters, such as the large wheeled-pullers LS1/2/3 class, with a larger horsepower traction motor for use on longer journeys. These were only used by the London Transport Executive. A number of these vehicles were used at the London, Tilbury and Southend Railway to provide service at Tilbury railway station and work the sidings of the LNER. Novels featuring wheeled-pullers include "The Hare and the Tortoise" by Iris Murdoch and "The Milkman's Journeys" by George Woodcock. The metabolism of ursodeoxycholic acid (UDCA) was examined in six healthy, non-alcoholic men. Deoxycholic acid was used as control. Endogenous bile acids were suppressed by constant iv infusion of chenodeoxycholic acid. A 10 mg dose of UDCA was administered orally with or without a bile duct catheter. Twenty-four-hour collection of urine was performed to determine the formation and excretion of the bile acid-derived metabolites, 7-keto-deoxycholic acid (7-KDCA), tauroursodeoxycholic acid (TUDCA), and taurine-conjugated taurine-7 alpha-hydroxy-deoxycholic acid (tauroolithocholic acid, TLCA). The levels of the bile acid-derived metabolites were determined by radioimmunoassay

Menu New England and the Netherlands serve as contrasting points of reference It's been a month since The Collecta Gallery asked Meline Decamps to curate an exhibition that explores contemporary art and design in Iceland and the Netherlands. Dutch Contexts holds a first show on display in The Collecta Gallery's Outlet Gallery in Reykjavik. The exhibition challenges the traditional Icelandic identity by presenting works of design with influences from the Dutch design world. In order to better understand Dutch culture, this edition includes a presentation of graphic design from the 1960s through the 2000s, including works by: Cees Karjaluoto, Jurriaan Krabbe, Christo, Reiner Lier, Nikita van Dam, Marc Newson and Leo Wilden.Q: ActionScript 3 If statement returns 'false' I have an if statement inside of an else statement in ActionScript 3, but the results return false. Can anyone help? if (victory) { //do something } else { if (current_user.profile.show_first_level == false) { //do something } else { //do something } } I've been reading other questions, but the code is different enough that I can't find an answer. Thanks. A: The problem is the code after if-else statement if (current_user.profile.show_first_level == false) This line checks if "current_user.profile.show_first_level" is equal to "false". Unfortunately, it always returns a falsy value. So this; if (current_user.profile.show_first_level == false) always return false and execute second block of code. I think you wanted to do something like this: if(current_user.profile.show_first_level!= true) // do something else if(current_user.profile.show_first_level == true) // do something else If you want to check if "show_first_level" field is not defined than you should do this: if(!current_user
